

About the Authors

Corinne Thomas-Kersting, M.S., CCC-SLP, developed the Describing and Interacting materials in this publication over a fifteen-year period in the Oregon public schools. She has worked in a variety of integrated and individualized settings with students from Kindergarten to 12th grade. Corinne currently works as an Augmentative Communication Consultant with the Portland Public Schools, developing visual systems for students who are nonspeaking or who have severe communication disorders.

Andrew McCormack, M.A., CCC-SLP, created the Language Touchdown and Language Mountain games in Describe It! Since 1990 he has evaluated and treated children with communication and learning deficits. He has worked with a variety of populations, including children with cerebral palsy, mental retardation, and autism. Andrew currently works as a Speech/Language Specialist with the Rochester City School District, in Rochester, New York, where he provides services to children with speech and language deficits.

Sally J. Satin, M.A., CCC-SLP, contributed the game You Name It! to this book. Sally travels across the country providing short-term speech-language services on a contractual basis. She specializes in adolescent and adult traumatic brain injury rehabilitation.
